III.H. Other Teaching Activities

In 2003, I started a psychology and counseling clinic at the Shelter House, a temporary shelter for people experiencing homelessness. The clinic provided counseling and psychological testing and assessment opportunities for graduate students. Services included individual, couples, family, and group counseling, psychological and mental health testing and assessment. All services were free to residents of the shelter. Developed and implemented a collaboration between the University of Iowa Counseling Psychology program, the Shelter House, and the Veterans Affairs Medical Center to develop a permanent housing program. Using monies from grants and Housing and Urban Development, houses were purchased and renovated to house individual residents, and job opportunities were contracted with local agencies. I supervised and advised doctoral students in their clinical and support practices activities. Dissertations and other publications resulted from this collaboration.
