MJ Bishop is inaugural director of the University System of Maryland's Center for Academic Innovation, which was established in 2013 to enhance and promote USM's position as a national leader in higher education academic innovations. Prior to coming to USM, Dr. Bishop was Associate Professor and Director of the Lehigh University College of Education's Teaching, Learning, and Technology Program where, in addition to being responsible for the institution's graduate programs in teacher education and instructional technology, she also played a leadership role in several campus-wide university initiatives. Author of numerous national and international articles, her research interests include exploring how various instructional media and delivery systems might be designed and used more effectively to improve learning.
