

Goals

Children can explain how public transportation helps people get where they want to go.

What

Children explore the types of public transportation around their community and the world. Children also build a “life-sized” cardboard bus to integrate what they have learned into their dramatic play.

Why

Transportation is a part of our daily lives, and vehicles often capture children’s interest.

Community

Children explore public transportation in and around their community. Community partners are invited to the culminating event.

Family

Family members can suggest a field trip location, celebrate with children at the culminating event, and support children’s learning while traveling on different types of transportation.

Copyright University of Maryland 2018