

Children tell a story through a performance.

During Showtime, children learn how to use music, dance, and theater – along with characters, settings, and props – to enhance their own stories and present their own performances.

The Showtime project taps into children's love of storytelling and performing while supporting Maryland's standards for the fine arts, including music, dance, and theater.

Family members can suggest a field trip location, celebrate with children at the culminating event, and support children's learning at home.

Children take a field trip to a community theater or high school/college drama program to see a live performance.
